Practical Estate Planning for the Real World

MARK J. ROGERS LISTENS CAREFULLY to his clients to ensure that their estate plans are not only technically correct but also work well in the real world. "Our job is to provide high-quality work and to not only get it right legally, but also to use the most effective tools," he says, citing properly funded revocable trusts as an example.

Since 1995, Rogers has provided personalized estate planning services at Angermeier & Rogers, LLP, a 30-year-old, AV-rated firm that also provides probate and trust administration, asset protection planning, planning for retirement assets, charitable giving, business succession planning and planning for Medicaid eligibility. A participating author of Your Life, Your Legacy and Love, Money, Control: Reinventing Estate Planning, Rogers is a frequent speaker, teacher and leader in regional organizations for estate planning attorneys and has been included in Milwaukee Magazine's Best Lawyers in Milwaukee.

"Practical planning is so important," he says. Along with his associate, Brenda A. Schlais, Rogers strives to put families first, a goal the former trial lawyer values highly. "It's a real chance to help people stay in control and protect their loved ones."
